CANADA BEREAVE BY DEATH GOVERNOR-GENERAL SUNDAY

Montreal, Que., Feb. 11—His Excellency Baron Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, passed away at 7:13 o'clock (EST) this evening, following a third operation at the Neurologic Hospital here for the relief of an inter-cranial pressure.

For the third time in history the King's representative in the Dominion of Canada died in this country while filling his official position; passing away on Sunday evening last in Montreal after having been taken from the official residence at Ottawa by special train to that city, where the latest appliances and the highest medical authorities were available to alleviate a condition of brain concussion, following a fall on the previous Tuesday.

John Buchan is dead! But John Buchan, author, publisher, statesman, and the King's representative as Governor-General of Canada from 1935 to 1940 will live for ever in the memory of all his friends and fellow Canadians.

He was born at Perth, Scotland, in 1875, and was thus in his 65th year. He received his education at Glasgow and Oxford Universities, and following his selection in 1935 by King George V for the high office he held at the time of his passing away, assumed the title of Baron Tweedsmuir.

On Tuesday of last week, while in the bathroom at his official home in Ottawa, he suffered a fall which rendered him unconscious, and although everything possible was done to obtain relief, and specialists from Montreal were rushed to his bedside the distinguished patient remained in a comatose condition until his death, never once regaining consciousness.

An operation was performed at Ottawa to relieve a pressure on the brain caused from the concussion, but this was of no avail, and His Excellency was rushed by special train to the Neurologic Hospital in Montreal, where another operation was performed on Friday last. The patient still remained in the same condition, although at times showing signs of rallying.

On Sunday last, still a third operation was performed, lasting some four hours, and the pressure was lifted from the brain, but after the operation had been seen by his medical advisers, a clot of blood developed in the arteries of one of his legs (which had remained paralysed since the accident) and this clot caused a cessation of the respiratory system and was the actual cause of death.

Lady Tweedsmuir, who with her son, Hon. Alastair Buchan, had spent the very many anxious hours at the bedside of her husband, and to whom the deepest sympathies of the Empire are offered, was at the death-bed, and following the demise she immediately returned home to Ottawa.

The body of the late Lord Tweedsmuir will lie in state in the Senate Chamber on Parliament Hill until the funeral services today (Wednesday) when it will be moved to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church in the capital city. Interment will finally be made in Great Britain, to which country the remains will probably be taken by a British battleship. A daughter and three sons are left to mourn with their mother the passing of one of Canada's great representatives of King and Empire.

LOCAL NOTES

We are glad to learn that Mr. Bill Stuart, who was taken to hospital last week end, is progressing somewhat from his attack of congestion of the lungs.

Capt. H. E. Balfour and Dr. Currie of Edmonton, were in town last week when they visited both high and public schools in the course of the school inspectors' duties.

We hear rumors of a fine array of prizes to be offered at the I.O.O.F. Leap Year Frolic on February 29th.

For the purpose of nominating an independent candidate for the forthcoming provincial elections, a convention is being called at Edmonton on Friday next.

Miss L. Bloom was home from Edmonton for a day or two with her parents here.

Miss Doris Foster is enjoying a couple of weeks' holiday from her duties at the Rudd and Patterson stores.

THANK YOU!

Expressing my appreciation for the vote of the electors at Monday's poll, I can assure you all of my best efforts on behalf of the Public School Board and your interests therein.

(Sgd.) ANNE McLEOD.

TWO NEW OFFICERS ON PUBLIC BODIES

With no excitement whatever, and indeed with very little interest displayed, the town elections have come and gone for another twelve-month period, and the close of the polls on Monday evening saw two new public servants elected to office in the persons of Mrs. Annie McLeod as member of the Public School Board, and Mr. J. E. Alderman as Councillor.

Voting throughout the day was slow and an almost record low number of citizens exercised their franchise, with the result that at the summing up of the votes, Returning Officer Kenny gave the results as follows:

For Council:
ALDERMAN, J. E. (elected) 74
HUNTINGFORD, W. J. (elected) 69
LISSIMORE, T. 55

For School Board:
McLEOD, Annie (elected) 71
CARSELL, W. (elected) 70
SAWERS, A. 61

The newly-elected councillors will take oath of office to serve for the next ensuing three years, while the school board members have a two-year term.

THANKS, INDEED!

I wish to express my thanks to all electors who on Monday gave me the support necessary to elect me as one of your Council representatives, and promise to exert my efforts to the best interests of all concerned for the well-being and advancement of our town.

(Sgd.) J. E. ALDERMAN.

AGAIN, THANK YOU!

For all the support given me at the polls on Monday, which returned me to a seat on your Council Board I am indeed grateful, and assure you I will use my best endeavors to continue to serve you for the best interests of all citizens as I have done for so many years in the past.

(Sgd.) W. J. HUNTINGFORD.

APPRECIATION!

I desire to thank all my supporters for their vote and influence whereby I was returned to a seat on the Public School Board, and assure all that I will continue to work for the best interests of you all as I have in the past.

W. CARSELL.

Favorite Troubadour Romantic Romance

Paced by the effervescent Bing Crosby, who gives out with more straight acting and less crooning than is his custom, "Paris Honeymoon" emerges as a highly original and delightful romantic comedy, studded with hilarious gags, winning performances and pleasant, if not smash calibre, music.

The story transplants Crosby to a mythical foreign country as the owner of the world's richest gold-mine, a superstitious American who has purchased a castle and is waiting for Shirley Ross to obtain a Paris divorce so they can marry. In the interim, however, he becomes romantically involved with an attractive member of the local peasantry, Francisca Gail.

"Paris Honeymoon" shows at the local theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. R. Tory was a business visitor to the city on Friday.

TOWN COUNCIL IN ROUTINE SESSION

Following is a record of the proceedings of the council of the Town of Wainwright, at its regular meeting on Tuesday, February 6th.

The members of council present at this meeting were Mayor Middlemas and Councillors Lissimore, Huntingford, Billing, Welch, Cork and Robinson.

The recorded proceedings at its regular meeting of January 16th, 1940, were read and, on motion by Councillor Cork, were adopted and confirmed as written.

A copy of a letter written to Mr. A. MacNamara, Deputy Minister of Public Works and Labor in the Province of Manitoba, by the Bureau of Relief and Public Welfare of the Province of Alberta, with reference to Mr. Paul Felt, was presented to council and, on motion by Councillor Billing, the communication was ordered filed.

A communication, addressed to Mayor Middlemas by Messrs. Patrin and Johnstone, auditors, dealing with the Municipal Inspector's report, was read in open council and, on motion by Councillor Lissimore, the communication was filed and the Mayor authorized to write the Department of Municipal Affairs in this connection.

Notice was received from the Department of Old Age Pensions for the Province of Alberta of the applications of Mr. John. Coss and Mrs. Eliza Amy Callas for Old Age Pensions and, on motion by Councillor (Continued on Page Four)

Funeral of Late Mrs. Wm. Bisson

On Wednesday morning last, Rev. Father Ehnman conducted the last rites at Blessed Sacrament church, when a large number of sympathizers and friends attended the requiem mass for the late Mrs. William Bisson, who passed away as reported in our last issue.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. P. Bransard, S. Rajotte, O. M. Michon, J. Stinart, I. Leduc and J. Tondy, and interment was at Wainwright cemetery. Flowers on the casket included those from The Family, Mr. and Mrs. S. Plaxton, Mr. and Mrs. L. Treffry, and a large number of spiritual offerings were received.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Wm. Bisson and family wish to express their heartfelt thanks for the loving sympathies extended to them in their sad loss of a loving wife and mother; and especially to Dr. H. C. Wallace and all the hospital nurses and staff.

Local Hockey Boys Suffers Two Defeats

The Wainwright hockey boys were visitors at Holden on Tuesday last, where they lost the game to the hosts 4-2. The weather being extremely warm, the ice was very sticky, which made the game rather difficult.

Goal getters for Wainwright were Bond assisted by Walker, and Gaudt with another of his long shots.

Linesup: Ken Hutchison; Gaudt, Dupre, Walker; Tory, Hardy, Lynch, Stewart, Fahner and Bond.

On Friday night a large crowd witnessed an exciting game of hockey when Imma visited Wainwright for the last league game before the playoffs. Watch for the dates of the league games.

At the end of the first period the score was 1-0 for Wainwright, this goal being made by Lynch, assisted by Tory. The next by Tory. In the second period Imma put in three goals and Wainwright two more, Hardy assisted by Dupre and Dupre unassisted. In the last encounter Imma scored three times while the local boys were not able to get near the net. Final score: 3-3 in favor of the visitors.

H. P. Schilt refereed the game.

A.Y.P.A. Conference Splendid Success

The rally of some 40 young people, held here in Wainwright, took upon itself not only the nature of a local and denominational character, but also that of an interdenominational rally of the youth of Wainwright and Irma.

The guest of the occasion, Mr. Garth Walker, brought with him the means of reaching this wider scope of 6-2. Himself a delegate of the World's Christian Youth Conference, held last year at Amsterdam, Holland, he was able to give everyone some of the super-denominational spirit which prevailed at Amsterdam. This spirit showed itself in the following ways.

At the Masonic hall, more than 60 young people, representing the United, Presbyterian and Anglican churches, enjoyed with keen interest the illustrated talk given by Mr. Walker of his trip through the Old Country, and at the conference. Following this, a real mixing up of all present was achieved through the means of games and lunch. This marks the second such interdenominational youth gathering.

The next by Tory. The next step, we hope, will take the form of a discussion group of some kind. On Sunday, Mr. Walker spoke to a gathering of over 80 people of the United and Anglican churches of Irma. At the evening service of the United church in Wainwright, he again gave forth the message of (Continued on Page 4)

Residents Along St. Lawrence See Prosperity With Seaway Plan

Thirty thousand acres of land along the St. Lawrence River (shown in black) will be inundated when and if the St. Lawrence seaway plan receives the final approval of Canada and the United States. With this inundated ocean-going vessels may continue on their way straight up to the Great Lakes. If the plan goes through the village of Iroquois will be wiped out and much of Morrisburg will be under water. Residents along the river are jubilant at the prospect of the seaway and forecast a wave of prosperity should the proposed plan receive the sanction of the Canadian and United States governments. Thousands of men and millions of dollars would be employed.

HILLS OF DESTINY

BY AGNES LOUISE PROVOST

CHAPTER I

The flip of a coin decided it. If Lee Hollister, listening to temple bells on the edge of a tropical city half a world away, had not felt that tug of homesickness for wind-swept plains and the tang of sage, upon a small silver product of the United States mint and started for home four months before he was expected, a number of quite exciting things might never have happened.

Even then, if he had continued straight on to Saunders by the moon local, as any reasoning adult might be expected to do, instead of bolting out of the three stations down the line, several other matters would at least have taken a notably different course. Worst of his arrival, for instance, would have trickled on ahead of him. Gideon Morse, that neat, sleek little man, undoubtedly would have dispatched a telegram east much sooner than he actually did, and from that moment would have kept an unobtrusive eye on the movements of this energetic young man to whom the Circle V ranch had been home for twenty years and Matt Blair something more than a father.

But the coin had spun, not once in that far-off city but again on the clanking local two hours away from Saunders, and Lee not only got off three stations ahead of his destination but immediately proceeded to make new and quite different arrangements for moving on.

The town's one hotel received him, and he changed from neat blue serge to disreputable old trousers and a flannel shirt and went out again, and down the sunbaked street. A horse was located and bargained for, with an eye for point, a second-hand saddle followed; minor purchases were made here and there.

When the job was finished the stranger in town clothes had disappeared, and in his place was a brown young man in a big Stetson who might have been any wandering cowboy from the back ranges, or a young rancher in town for the day.

Long before the train that he had left was whistling for Saunders station, Lee Hollister was on his way.

He rode easily, with the grace of long custom, picking up familiar landmarks and thinking that the old sandy waste looked good after nearly two years of wandering, even to the clumps of last year's tumbleweed, wind-bunched in the bottom of a draw.

By late afternoon he had left the high desert for the twilight of a narrow canyon whose ragged walls loomed six hundred feet above the canyon floor. He camped there for the night. In the morning he started on again, up a thread of trail that hugged the canyon wall, out again on an open flat and over a ridge where the cedar and pinon gave way to slim pines.

The far side of the ridge slanted down to a tiny mountain meadow. There was water there, and he dismounted, eased the cinches to rest his horse and set about to appease a healthy hunger. Moving easily and lightly, he merged into his surroundings as naturally as the tall straight pines back of him or the brown needle carpet beneath. He was tall and straight himself, a full six feet of smoothly co-ordinated muscle, with a keenly modeled profile, black eyes that saw much and betrayed little, and a lean young face that sun and wind had finished in a warm brown.

He was not in the least concerned that there were people, plenty of people, who would think him a lunatic to waste two days and part of a railroad ticket in order to make the longest and roughest way home. But he had chosen to arrive from the opposite direction, and on horseback. It was the way by which he had first come, a silent, black-headed little savage, with weary body and suspicious eyes, twenty years before. Twenty years almost to the day, Matt Blair had brought him. Now he was coming back the same way, over the same trails.

Late afternoon found him going steadily downward, not in a direct grade, but in a rolling succession of low ridges. He topped the crest of the last one and drew in.

There it lay, a wide valley floor deep in grass, where grazing never failed in the driest seasons. Mountains rimmed it around, taking the brunt of winter storms on their old shoulders. Off to the west and the southwest they were little more than ragged hills, but on the east and the northeast timbered heights looked down, cut with deep canyons, and thrusting out gaunt promontories of rock. At the southwestern end the ranch buildings lay, low and pleasantly straggling.

Lee's eyes warmed as he looked down. There was no place like it. It was good to be back again, to slip in this way and surprise Matt. Good old Matt. Virginia would be home, too, once more a rancher's girl, after the years of travel and fashionable head and shoulders above all competitors. It polled 253 votes, while the next in line netted only 85.

schools that an indulgent father had given her.

The warmth vanished in a puzzled frown. Over on the left his ranging eye had caught sight of a wide, ugly slash on the timbered slope. That was odd. Timber was too valuable to be wasted. That fever cut that way. That strip was wastefully cut with high stumps like the snapped-off masts of a wrecked ship. Lee's sharpened glance flickered toward the valley again. Down there he had seen a small bunch of cattle, perhaps fifty or sixty. That also was unusual. The Circle V cattle always ranged the hills at this time of the year.

Lee wheeled his horse abruptly, retraced his way for a short distance, and started zigzagging downward.

MINIMIZE AWKWARDNESS

There'll be no hint of "an awkward age" about the looks of a school girl who wears this well-designed little dress (8474). The flared skirt, the puffed sleeves and the high neckline, finished with a little tailored collar, minimize any tendency to thinness that fast-growing young ladies have to contend with. And that pointed basque waistline has a slim, grown-up look that they will love.

Practical for summer daytime and also to start school on the first Fall days, this dress will be pretty in plaid gingham, plain-colored linen or gay percale prints, with the little collar in crisp, fresh white, set off by a small bow!

Now that Mrs. Felicia M. Paden, primary instruction supervisor, has been able to construct, equip and furnish a model school reading room and library for $30, it seems quite likely that any elementary school can be supplied with this important educational feature. The demonstration was made at the Bagley Training School, which is the teacher training laboratory of the Northeastern Teachers' College at Tahlequah, Oklahoma. The model reading room contains six tables, twenty-four chairs, window seats, one stereoscope rack, four bookcases and one magazine rack. The decorations were done largely by students.

I have read with great interest of the initiative and progress of the women of Talladega, Alabama, who organized the first women's chamber of commerce in the United States. IMPROVE MANURE FOR 1940 CROPS

Losses of fertility from stable manure represent one of the major operation defects on many Canadian farms, says G. R. Snyder, soil chemist. The first loss occurs in the stable through volatilization of ammonia, a form of nitrogen, the gas so keenly noticeable when one enters the stable in the early morning. Further losses quickly follow through seepage and fermentation in the storage heap or when manure is spread in the field under unfavorable weather conditions. That the loss may be considerable can be appreciated when it is realized that the liquid manure produced annually per cow is estimated to be equivalent in value to $10.00 worth of commercial fertilizer.

Total prevention of loss is impossible under average farm conditions, but much can be and is being done to lessen appreciably this unsatisfactory condition. Chemical products are now available that will absorb some of the liquid manure and combine with ammonia to form non-volatile compounds. A granular type of superphosphate has proven most effective for the purpose and has been endorsed almost unanimously by agricultural officials. The absorption process also conserves potash and other soluble minerals.

Losses from the storage pile are most severe when fresh manure is carelessly dumped in loose heaps exposed to severe freezing, strong winds heavy leaching or excessive heating. The loss is reduced when each day's manure is spread uniformly in building a straight-sided, compact, level heap which will retain moisture and prevent fermentation.

For maximum returns from manure, due recognition must be given its strong and weak fertility features. A ton of well preserved, mixed manure is equivalent in plant food content to 100 pounds of 10-14-10 fertilizer. Compare this with a typical well-balanced grain fertilizer of 2-6-6 formula and it is readily seen that manure is relatively very low in phosphoric acid, the mineral substance most deficient in Canadian soils.

How to correct this weakness, and secure the other benefits from the use of granular phosphate in stables, is well illustrated in data reported by W. B. George, Chief of the Department of Chemistry and Agronomy, Kemptville Agricultural School, following very carefully conducted experimental work in co-operation with farmers in Eastern Ontario. Three tests in 1930, using ensilage corn as the experimental crop, show average yield of 10.10 tons per acre from un-manured plots; 17.35 from plots receiving 10 tons per acre of ordinary manure; 19.13 tons from area treated with manure reinforced with granular phosphate in the stable; and 21.85 tons from area treated with the super-manure plus a 2-6-6 fertilizer.

An earlier report of Mr. George's shows that phosphated manure not only increased the yield per acre but greatly improved the feeding quality of ensilage corn, as indicated by the higher content of crude protein, calcium and 20.35% more phosphorus. The crops of 1940 depend to a considerable extent on this winter's manure supply, and care now will mean greater profits at harvest time.

The members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association are now holding their provincial meetings throughout Canada. The conferences in the West for the most part are over.

It was most inspiring, I thought, to see gathered together groups of quiet serious-minded earnest seed growers, who generally are but little known to the public, but who specialize in making available to their fellow farmers seeds of the most important varieties of crops at most modest prices, and which seeds are true-to-variety to an amazingly high standard of excellence.

It was inspiring, too, I thought, to see these men listen patiently for long hours to the lectures of professional plant breeders, all in order

Canadian wheat, because of its high quality, deservedly commands a good premium on world markets, a premium which is passed along to all the wheat producers in the price they receive for their grain. But how many people, even farmers, I wonder, realize that the extra price which they enjoy for the grain they produce is in great measure the direct result of the painstaking work done by these quiet but most competent farmers—close partners of the scientific plant breeders—the members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Cold wave in Texas grain belt has caused irreparable damage to oat crop—Severe cold wave has swept Europe and damaged winter grain crops—Freight rate from Atlantic ports to Antwerp has declined to 60 cents per 100 pounds—Finland purchases quantities of American rye.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Some authorities estimate world wheat surplus larger than ever before recorded—Argentina corn acreage approximately five million acres greater than last year—Australia wheat crop is estimated to be the third largest on record—October 1st, 1940, corn "carry-over" in U.S.A. expected to be over 650 million bushels.

DID YOU REGISTER?

Each year sees very many disappointed and somewhat wrathful citizens turned away from the polls at municipal election time because their names are not on the voters' lists. This year proved no exception, either.

There are a great number in Wainwright who have a perfect right to vote, but who were unable to exercise their franchise because of not having registered their claim to this privilege, and because they did not check the lists to make sure that their names had been included.

The list of those entitled to vote is made up each year from those who are designated as property owners on the assessment roll for that year. Each year, also, those who are classed as relatives of property owners, and tenants, who have established residence according to law may be registered in the specified way — BUT THESE MUST REGISTER EACH YEAR — and it is this latter fact which must be borne in mind.

During the months of September and October in each year these relatives and tenants may make their registrations and thus become entitled to vote at municipal elections. But this list is made up entirely each year, and not carried over.

Every person is a British subject who (a) is born in any of the British Dominions or on a British ship, no matter what was the nationality of his or her parents; (b) was born elsewhere of a father who, at the time of the child's birth, was a British subject; (c) or has been personally naturalized in Canada or in other of the Dominions; (d) or has had his name included in certificate of naturalization granted a parent under the same Act; (e) is the child of a person naturalized in Canada before January 1, 1918, other than under the Imperial Naturalization Act, and was a minor and a resident of Canada at the time of the naturalization of the parent.

A woman becomes a British subject if she has married a man who at the date of marriage was born or naturalized British subject. Or if she married a man who was alien at time of marriage, but became naturalized prior to January 15, 1932. If a woman marries an alien who becomes naturalized after January 15, 1932, she may acquire citizenship by registering a declaration that she desires to acquire British nationality.

There are several ways in which British nationality may be lost. An individual may become naturalized in another country; or if naturalized here may have the certificate of naturalization cancelled. A woman who has before January 15, 1932, married a man who at date of marriage was not a British subject, loses her citizenship. A woman who after January 15, 1932, marries an alien has by virtue of the marriage acquired her husband's nationality. A woman whose husband has ceased to be a British subject may register a declaration that she desires to retain her British nationality. Otherwise she acquires her husband's change of allegiance.

These laws are NOT made by the municipal authorities (and also are amended from time to time), so that all who are not actual ratepayers should keep themselves acquainted with these details and abide by the existing law. It is embarrassing both to election officials and to would-be voters to have such situations crop up, and yet in the face of the law the officials are helpless.

Our franchise costs too much to be treated as lightly as it is often treated, and we have always maintained the far more public should be given to the requirements as to registrations. Taxpayers should peruse the roll far enough in advance of voting day to see that they are registered (if so entitled) and then this annual trouble would be avoided. It seems, though, that we have a little explosion over these matters as often as a municipal election is held.

WHO MAY VOTE IN FEDERAL ELECTION?

The Dominion Elections Act of 1935 has the following requirements for a voter in the federal election: He must be 21 years of age or over before the polling day; British subject by birth or naturalization; ordinarily resident in the Dominion twelve months immediately preceding polling day, and resident in the electoral district at the date of issue of the writ for the election.

CONTINUATION OF A.Y.P.A. CONFERENCE

HUGE SUCCESS

"Christus Victor", the motto of the Amsterdam conference.

However, the underlying purpose of this rally was the re-establishment of the A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas' as a fully organized branch of the diocesan and dominion-wide organization.

On the Sunday morning, 30 "Y.P.s" attended the early morning communion. From there they went to breakfast at the hotel. After breakfast the implications of the four-fold program were explained and discussed.

At the 11 o'clock service, at which Mr. Walker was the guest speaker, the new installed in office the president of the local branch, Mr. Roland Wilkins, and the secretary-treasurer, Miss Joyce Renville.

After an afternoon's outing, 30 young people crowded into the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. McLeod, for tea and discussion.

This event became the high light of the week end. The discussion evolved in such a way that everyone was made to think and many made decisions for Christ in their own lives. In this way, the personal benefit of such a gathering was not lost in consideration of the wider vision.

At the evening service, the rectory sought to apply still further some of the implications of the Amsterdam motto, "Christus Victor", which made for a fitting climax of the week-end.

During this service, Mr. Hugh Reeves, on behalf of the diocesan and dominion A.Y.P.A., presented the local branch with their renewed character. Before doing so, he gave a very comprehensive story of the life and aims of this organization.

The party from Edmonton included, as well as those above mentioned, George Alexander, Barbara Woodhead, Mr. and Mrs. M. Pritchard, Norman Pickard, Mary McPherson, Miriam McIntyre, Kay Croft and Archie Bowler, of Millet.

"TOPPER" APPEARS

ON LOCAL SCREEN

This second "Topper" picture—"Topper Takes a Trip" is described as a sequel to the first, and is in reality a straightforward extension of the first story. This one deals with a divorce action brought by the name character's wife and the means by which the deceased lady, whose claim upon eternal reward derives from post mortem intervention in his domestic affairs, staves off final separation.

Roland Young again plays "Topper" as though he were indeed he, and Billie Burke is even better this time than last as "Mrs. Topper", with better lines to speak and more of them. Constance Bennett again displays a fine evaluation of point and tone as the lightly earthbound sophisticated, and Alan Mowbray is potentially if briefly accepted as the butler.

The ectoplasmic aspect, much more pronounced than in the first picture, is varied by the addition of a recently departed wirehead terror, and Cary Grant appears via flashback in the early sequences.

As in "Topper", the physical appearances of the now-you-see-here-you-don't-heres are productive of the loudest and longest laughter. The story starts in New York and moves to Paris, and the time is the present.

Don't miss this week end picture at the Elite theatre.

A friend said to me the other day, "You're always boasting about the Home Towns of Alberta. Surely you don't think they're perfect?"

Well, I admitted they're not perfect; few places. But I don't think they make many mistakes in home towns. However, here's one mistake I think some municipalities DO make and I'd like to point it out, in case

"REMEMBERS OF OTHER DAYS"

TEN YEARS AGO Mr. and Mrs. George Smith are enjoying a winter vacation in Florida. Mr. J. C. Shirley sold the building he has been using for a barber shop to Mr. W. Loudfoot. He plans to leave shortly to join his family in Los Angeles.

Leave Canada to Aid Finland

In Calgary this week. Miss Jessie Sutherland is now chief operator at the local telephone exchange. Miss Nellie Carroll having resigned her position and left for Winnipeg.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO Mr. Owens purchased the W. H. Kent place north of Fabyan recently and plans to farm there.

Miss Jean Messier left on Tuesday for Vancouver, where she will spend a vacation with friends.

An old-timer of the Edgerton district passed away on Wednesday in the person of Mr. W. J. Gilbert. He was 87 years of age and had suffered for some time from blood poisoning. To visit with relatives Mr. W. S. Goulet left last week for the east.

Following an operation which she recently underwent, Miss M. Rodden is convalescing at her home in Chauvin.

EDGERTON

Another week of marvellous weather leaves us amazed at the wonderfully mild winter we have enjoyed so far.

Of all the winters we can remember (too many!) we cannot recall one quite so nice. Of course, our memory may not be very accurate but in any case we hope that these almost spring-like days will continue even if it does not suit the cutlers.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hughes left on Thursday for their home in Edmonton, after spending nearly three weeks here visiting Major and Mrs. Nelson and renewing many acquaintances. Harry said his teller's cage will feel very cramped when he returns to his duties, because of all the out-door fun indulged in during their stay.

Several members of the Edgerton Masonic Lodge drove to Wainwright on Thursday evening to attend the Lodge at that point which, we understand, was being honored by a visit from a high official.

A Social Credit convention was held in the local theatre on Wednesday last, the chief business of the session is believed to have been the nomination of candidates.

Robert Tennant, sr., of the Rosemyne district, passed away at his home on the morning of Wednesday, February 7th, on what would have been the 90th anniversary of his birth. It is understood that death was due to cerebral hemorrhage. He leaves to mourn his passing, his widow, a daughter Ena (Mrs. R. H. Pacey) and a son, Allan, besides many relatives in and around this district, and others in Ontario.

Ribstone hockey teams were both victorious here on Thursday evening but the local boys didn't seem to feel very badly about it as our teams were incomplete, thanks to the flu, which had laid low several of the boys. Those that were well did their level best, but Ribstone was far superior, as revealed by the dismal story told in the final scores: Juniors 3-2, Midgets 8-3. There are lots of days ahead yet for hockey and as the boys are not downhearted, what does it matter?

There is considerable speculation around the village as to how long our postmaster will retain sufficient tools to carry on in the P.O. It seems that he has recently become the proud possessor of several small power tools and is just yearning to get busy with them. We understand that he has

400 B.C. IN ANCIENT ARMENIA

About the same time that the Greeks had adopted as a national beverage the brew called "Zythum" and "Zythos", the Armenians found it to their taste. It is mentioned in Armenian history, 400 B.C., by Xenophon in his account of the retreat of 10,000 Greeks, who states that the people of Armenia at that time and earlier had used a drink made from barley.

IT'S HEAVENLY — ANGEL FOOD CAKE

INTO every homemaker's life comes the day when even a gloriously tender angel food cake is not quite "different" enough to set before her guests. But, HEAVENLY ANGEL FOOD — ah, that's different and here's how it is made:

HEAVENLY ANGEL FOOD

First, it is suggested that Mrs. Hostess make her Sunday best angel food, letting it cool as usual. Then to impart the "heavenly" touch, carefully cut out the center of the cake, leaving the bottom, sides and top intact. This will leave a "trough" into which the following luscious mixture is placed: 3/4 pint whipping cream (whipped), 1 1/2 to 2 cups fresh strawberries (washed) and the cake which was removed from the center of the angel food (torn into pieces). Pile this mixture lightly into the "trough" and top with additional sliced strawberries. Place in refrigerator to chill and become "luscious".

The clean-washed, humidified air of the modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator provides an ideal atmosphere for retaining the freshness in cakes; therefore, you can bake the cake the day before the party, and store it in the ice refrigerator until time to impart the final touch on the day of the party.

swiftly in. Presently she came out and said to Cary, "She wants to see you. You'd better go in."

When Cary went in Lucretia had her face turned away and she did not open her eyes. Cary sat down beside the bed and waited.

The room was as usual in considerable disorder and fragrant with heavy perfumes and creams. The pinnate dress lay across a chair where Lucretia had discarded it, probably because she could not find room in the stuffed pieces of luggage. If Lucretia never wore a beautiful dress like that again, if she never laughed gaily again, Cary felt with a quick twist of her heart that she would always blame herself. She closed her eyes tight and when she opened them again she found Lucretia watching her.

Cary reached out almost timidly and touched Lucretia's hand.

"Do you feel better, darling?"

It hurt her to see her mother so old-looking. The fine wrinkles about her eyes were alarmingly deepened. In bed, without her chin-strap, the muscles of her neck sagged ungraciously.

"You love him very much, don't you, Cary?" Lucretia said in a small subdued voice.

"Yes," Cary said simply, letting the misery of her heart well up in her again at the thought of Tony.

"That is something I have missed all my life," Lucretia's voice was indifferently said. "I thought I could get along without it—that it was not important to my happiness. I know better now. Cary, I'm not going to try to keep you from him any longer. I want you to go to him. Someday maybe I shall be able to reconcile myself to your marrying him, but you'll have to give me time. It's not easy to forget."

She turned her face to the wall. Cary waited for her to speak again.

Finally she said, "I'm tired, darling—so tired. Please go now."

CHAPTER XXXV

For the second time that day Cary climbed the stairs that led to Tony and Joe's apartment, but this time her heart was beating wildly and her knees felt like tissue paper.

Joe opened the door, in answer to her knock.

"Is Tony here?"

His keen eyes disconcertingly scrutinized her from head to foot before he spoke. "No, he headed back for the ranch less than an hour ago and told me I was to look after the horses until he saw me."

Cary stood there and looked at Joe incredulously. She thought, Tony gone—gone back to the ranch. But of course that would be the first place he would go.

"Thanks, Joe," Cary said, hoping he did not see the deep lines of disappointment. She started to turn away, but Joe stepped into the hallway after her.

"I guess you don't know that Rex Garth is back there eating high-class California oats," he said.

"Rex Garth back? But how?"

"Well, Jim Constance owed everybody and his granddaddy, and credit began to crowd him. So Jim came hot-footing to Mr. Garth yesterday and wanted him to take Rex back at the claiming price. But Mr. Garth wouldn't give him but $1,000."

"But Jim paid $2,000 for him." Tears were beginning to push hard against Cary's eyelashes, so she said quickly, "Thanks, Joe, for telling me all this. I'd feel a lot better if you and I could be friends. What do you say?" She held out her hand. Joe did not hesitate. He gripped it in his hard, rough one. His small eyes were no longer busy.

Cary smiled and for the first time in weeks the trickery in her eyes matched the pretty lift of the corners of her mouth. "I do want it that way, Joe, because, you see, if Mr. Garth will have me, I'm going to marry him right away."

Joe swallowed hard. "I guess that's what his old man was hoping would happen all along."

Cary's eyes opened wide in surprise. "Otherwise, why would he leave you half them horses and divide a good stable like that? He likes you awfully well."

Cary said gently, hardly above a whisper, "Joe, I hope David Garth knows about Tony and me now."

From Tony's apartment Cary drove to the airport and called Ivy. "Don't be alarmed, darling, but I'm going to San Francisco tonight."

"He went back to the ranch?" Ivy said, guessing immediately what had happened.

"Yes, and I'm going there, too."

There is no other tobacco JUST LIKE OLD CHUM

Cary said happily. "I'm going home."

After that Cary had time only to make arrangements to have the car taken back to the garage where she had rented it and to buy her ticket before the last call came for all passengers to go aboard. And then as the pilot gunned the motors and the big, gray plane went skimming down the runway, Cary felt herself relax for the first time in weeks.

The next morning she was up and dressed before the fog lifted from the span of the Golden Gate bridge. In her eagerness to be on her way to the ranch, she forgot all about breakfast, which she intended to pick up on her way to the garage to rent a car.

But when she turned into the ever-lustrous-lined avenue that led up to the rambling old Spanish house, her heart began to play tricks again, as it had the night before when she climbed up the stairs to Tony's apartment.

She got out of the car and went around the house into the garden. The white hibiscus was still in bloom and she bent over it to nestle a waxy blossom in her hand. She was remembering the night Tony sent her a spray like this, when she looked up and found him standing close to her, watching her intently. There were tense lines around his eyes and his mouth looked harsh.

"Why did you come?" he asked in low voice.

"Lucretia sent me," she said, waiting tremulously for him to know what part her mother had played in this meeting.

"Is that the only reason?" he asked. He did not offer to touch her but his eyes were like hungry hands upon her.

"No, Tony. I would have come in spite of her. I know now. Nothing could have kept me away. Do you want me, Tony?"

"Do I want you?" he laughed brusquely. "Of course you know that I do!"

"Then nothing matters now—nothing you told us last night."

He came to her and put his arms around her. She slid her arms up about his neck and drew his dark head down close to her shining one.

"Cary, I promise you I'll never let you regret this for one moment." His gaze passed slowly from her eyes to her lips and he kissed her as he had never kissed her before.

"Tony," she whispered breathlessly when she could draw herself a little away from him. "Remember that when you take me you'll have to take all my possessions, too. The horses are about all I have. But I'll try to make up to you in some other way for paying Jim the money I owed."

"Cary, that belongs to yesterday. We'll never look back again. The whole future is before us now. Together we can't fail. Chief Cal will

U.G.G. Directors Seek Pay on Crop

An interim payment by the Canadian Wheat Board before seeding in being advocated by United Grain Growers, Limited. Following a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Company in Winnipeg last week the following telegram was despatched to members of the Cabinet Wheat Committee at Ottawa, by the president, R. B. L. Low.

The Board of Directors of United Grain Growers Limited desires to urge that the Canadian Wheat Board be authorized to make a further distribution before seeding to western wheat producers who have delivered wheat to the Board and that this should not be delayed until the whole crop of 1939 has been sold. Such a payment, if made in sufficient time before spring work opens, will materially assist in enabling western agriculture to contribute its maximum strength to national production during 1940. We would ask that such a payment be as large as possible in view of all existing circumstances and feel that an interim payment of not less than 10 cents per bushel would be justified, with the consideration to the lower grades of wheat on which a larger payment may well be considered.

According to 1924 figures the United States produces annually about 70% of the world's corn; 60% of its cotton and 50% of its tobacco.

"Girl of the Turf"

CHAPTER XXXV

Jim Constance stood in the doorway, uncertain what to do, obviously surprised to find Tony there. His gaze covered the entire room.

Suddenly he said, "What is this? Old home week? Lou, my dear girl, you look as if you had been for a free ride—once around." He laughed loudly.

Tony said, his voice cutting and hard, "Come in, Jim, and cut the comedy. Cary and Mrs. Tyle know who you are and what you are."

Jim's face became choleric.

"I suppose you're been shooting off your mouth, but I'm sure Lou knows better than to pay any attention to you." He looked at Lucretia, but she returned the look as a total stranger.

"Now, Jim," Tony said quietly, "you're going to listen to me for once whether it's good for you or not. You have played every game crooked that you've ever been in. You've broken every rule of sportsmanship. You've lied and cheated and kept your word to no one."

"Those are broad statements, my boy."

"Call them anything you like, Jim, but get this straight, I know you planted that buzzer on Cary's horse this afternoon—and I'm not the only one who knows. The stewards, too, are on to you."

"What do you know about the stewards?" The color was fading from Jim's face.

"After that buzzer business," Tony continued, "Joe Graziani and I got to work and rounded up one of your pals Half-Pint Benson. With a little encouragement, he talked to the stewards. He was too badly scared and anxious to save his own hide. It seems that, in the conversations, he also mentioned other shady tricks. You know as well as I do, Jim, that that means you're finished—washed up for good. You'll be barred from every track in the country. You're beaten, so you'd better dust and never show your face around another racing stable as long as you live."

Jim's face was now white with fury. He took a step toward Tony as though he were about to strike him. Tony stood his ground. "Anger won't do you any good," he said tersely. "I'm warning you—get out and stay out!"

Jim wavered a moment. Then, with a curse, he turned abruptly and strode from the room.

When the door slammed behind him, Lucretia swayed gently as a willow and crumpled into a pitiful heap at Cary's feet.

"Lucretia!"

Cary dropped to her knees and bent a thoroughly frightened face close to the small white one that showed no evidence of life. Tony knelt quickly on the other side of Lucretia and reached for the frail wrist and its pulse.

"Better get a doctor in a hurry," he said. "I'll carry her to her bed."

He lifted the inert form in his arms

meatless lenten

By Betty Barclay

The forty days of Lent are more of a boon than many housewives believe. Unable to serve routine meat dinners, the ruler of the kitchen must experiment with other main course tastes. . . . and in so doing, she adds scores of excellent recipes to her year 'round file. Here are a few suggestions for Lent—and later on.

Cream of Spaghetti Soup

Macaroni, spaghetti or egg noodles—foods with a high proportion of carbohydrates—are particularly adaptable to the changing spring weather.

¾ lb. spaghetti
1 medium carrot, sliced thin
3 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon celery salt
¼ cup strained tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
½ small onion, minced
1 tablespoon flour
1½ cups top milk
Cook spaghetti and carrot in 2 quarts boiling salted water until tender. Crush to pulp with masher. Melt butter in a sauce pan, add onion, and saute for 5 minutes. Add flour and stir until smooth. Add salt, pepper, celery salt, tomatoes, milk and parsley. Pour sauce into pot containing cooked spaghetti—arrot pulp and bring to boiling point. Serve piping hot with whipped cream. Serves 4.

Filet of Fish, Walkiki (with Pineapple Sauce)

2 tablespoons butter
4 finely chopped shallots
6 filets of sole (or other white fish)
1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley
Salt and pepper
1 cup Hawaiian pineapple juice
1 cup of stock
¼ teaspoon mixed herbs
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sugar
2 egg yolks
Brush down fish
Butter a baking pan or dish, grease.

3 cups milk, scalded
1 cup shredded coconut

Line 9-inch pie plate with pastry, rolled ¼-inch thick, allowing pastry to extend 1 inch beyond edge. Fit loosely on plate. Fold edge back to form standing rim and flute with fingers. Combine eggs, sugar and salt; add milk gradually, then add coconut and mix thoroughly. Pour into pie shell. Bake in hot oven 450° F. 20 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake 15 minutes longer. Cool.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda

the shallots in it and the filets of fish on top of the shallots, sprinkle with parsley, salt and pepper, and add the pineapple juice and stock. Place the mixed herbs (tied in a piece of cheesecloth) in the liquid cover with a buttered paper, and put on top of stove. Bring to boiling point; then place in moderate oven (350° F.) and let simmer until fish is cooked. Remove fish to warm platter.

To prepare sauce: Melt butter, add flour and stir well until cooked; add the broth from the fish (adding enough extra broth or water to make 2 cups) and let cook at least five minutes. Then add the slightly beaten egg yolk and cook 1 more minute. Pour sauce over filets, sprinkle with parsley, and garnish with triangles of hot pineapple and slices of lemon. Serves 5.

Nut Dressing

¼ cup sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup vinegar or lemon juice
¼ cup salad oil or melted butter
1 egg yolk
½ teaspoon salt

Few grains cayenne
1 teaspoon dry mustard
¼ cup salted nut meats, finely chopped

Place all ingredients except nut meats in mixing bowl. Beat with rotary egg beater until mixture thickens. If thicker consistency is desired, place in refrigerator to chill before serving. Just before serving, blend in nut meats. Makes 1½ cups.

Shredded Delight

1 quart milk
1 egg
1 tablespoon corn starch
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 shredded wheat biscuits
Pinch salt

Warm milk in double boiler. Beat egg, add corn starch, sugar and salt. Pour into warm milk and stir until thick. When cool, add vanilla and pour into dish containing two crumbled shredded wheat biscuits. Whipped cream may be used as a topping.

¼ teaspoon salt
2-4 cup butter or other shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 cup milk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and cream together thoroughly. Add egg and chocolate, beating until smooth. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating well after each addition. Turn into greased mold, filling 2-3 full, cover tightly and steam 2 hours. Serve hot with your favorite pudding sauce. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 10.

A CUP OF HOT CHOCOLATE

A hot chocolate drink is especially appropriate in winter for social occasions, for much-needed warmth after a session outdoors or after winter sports. It is ideal at such times because of its flavor and the extra food value contained in the chocolate, the sugar, milk and eggs which are used.

This chocolate syrup is the base for a quick, hot drink. It can be kept on hand and combined with scalded milk when needed.

Chocolate Syrup

4 or 5 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 cup sugar
2-3 cup hot water
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten

Melt chocolate over hot water; cool to lukewarm. Add sugar to water, stirring until sugar is dissolved; cool to lukewarm. Add syrup to egg yolks, one-fourth at a time, beating well after each addition; add chocolate in same way. Then continue beating 1 minute, or until slightly thickened. Turn into jar, cover tightly; place in refrigerator. Syrup will keep several days. Use 2 tablespoons syrup for 1 cup milk. Makes 2 cups.

French chocolate is hot chocolate, de luxe. Serving it at the tea hour with dainty bread and butter sandwiches is a gracious form of entertaining.

French Chocolate

2½ squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup water
¼ cup sugar
Dash of salt
½ cup cream, whipped
6 cups hot milk

Add chocolate to water and place over low flame, stirring until chocolate is melted and blended. Add sugar and salt and boil 4 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool. Fold into cream. Place one rounded teaspoon of chocolate mixture in each serving cup and pour hot milk over it, filling the cup. Stir well to blend and serve at once. Serves 6.

This chocolate mixture also makes an excellent sauce. It may be served as hot fudge sauce on ice cream or puddings. When used as a sauce, omit whipped cream.

Probably the monarch of all salads is a calavo half shell, filled with juicy sections of grapefruit over which has been poured a judicious amount of tart, thin, French dressing. A few slices of green olives give an unusual flavor.

"HILLS OF DESTINY"

By Agnes Louise Provost

A serial story in which is related a delightful Western

Romance

MODERN !
THRILLING !!
KALEIDOSCOPIC !!!

LOVE IN A WESTERN SETTING!

Miss Provost is the author of many best sellers, among them, "The Closed Door", "Fortune's Wheel" and "Honeymoon Wife". She is also the author of many short stories that have appeared in various magazines.

The author has an eye for color and an ear for sweet sounding words. She paints pictures of the West worthy of the old masters. She has spent many years in the country she writes about. She has the quality of understanding human emotions and the faults of mankind.

"HILLS OF DESTINY" is a love story you will long remember, presented against a background alive with thrilling action—appealing, pleasing.

If Lee Hollister, half the world away, had not felt the tug of nostalgia and started for home four months before he was expected, a number of quite exciting things might never have happened. Late afternoon found Lee going steadily downward, not on a direct grade, but in a rolling succession of low ridges. He topped the crest of the last one and drew in. The flip of a coin had decided it—Lee kept on and appeared on the scene just when a strong hand and courageous heart were urgently needed. Then things began happening.

That's the thumbnail of "HILLS OF DESTINY", in which Miss Provost tells a powerful story superbly well.

First installment of this grand new serial appears in The Star this week. Don't miss it!
